my aunt and uncle. It was all planned prior to the pregnancy. I remember how great it was to witness it all transpire. My mom said it was one of the best feelings she's ever had. Being able to give something like that when you are capable is simply amazing. While I question whether or not I ever want to have children of my own, I've always felt a very strong propensity towards wanting to help a couple who can't do so. In fact, when a good friend of mine told me of her sister went through 5 miscarriages, my heart sank. Since this was a close friend who helped me out earlier in my life, I offered to be a surrogate to her sister and her husband voluntarily (with only medical costs covered). Ultimately, they decided to go the adoption route, but they always know I'm here to consider as an option. My own sister went through the wretched trauma of severe endometriosis and lost all of her reproductive organs before there was any hope to salvage. She had to undergo a complete hysterectomy at the age of 31. So I can appreciate the precious gift I could potentially give, and would not like that to go to waste... Anything we have not asked? a I'm sure there is so much more for me to share (as I have a tendency to be overly verbose and open)! I'm as open and hone stas they come. My life is an open book, so don't be shy!...

BECOMING A DONOR.

How long have you been thinking about it?.

Being a donor is a big responsibility. It requires going to several doctor's appointments, taking injections and having a minor out - patient surgery. Our office, the doctor's office, and your intended parent (s) will count on you to be responsible throughout the entire cycle. So you feel About 3 years.

I am absolutely prepared for this process. I've been exploring and researching this for years and am familiar with the entire process (through reading and speaking to agencies). I am absolutely ready to assist in making a major positive
